EXPENSIVE THRESHING.

In Some Cases the Cost of Threshing and the Value of Grain About Equal.

Much has been said at times regarding the grain crop on the south side this year, and it seems that the whole has not yet been told. The wheat crop, it is pretty well known, was more of a failure than ever before. There have been other years when the crop was light, but this season's yield broke the record. The cause undoubtedly was an excess of water during the winter. Some fields were grown with no irrigation whatever, but the rain was so plentiful that the crop rusted and was a failure, not even being fit for hay. What wheat did mature was very light, going about six sacks to the acre. The barley fared better, and an average crop has been harvested, much of the crop going at about 500 pounds to the acre, and some considerably better than that. The unusual rainfall in the winter did not damage the barley as it did the wheat, and those farmers who the past season used their ground for barley instead of wheat are congratulating themselves.

The failure of the wheat crop and the rank growth of the other grains on account of so much water, caused other complications that caused the farmers to lose money. Threshing was an expensive proposition this year. In order for the owner of a threshing machine to make anything he was obliged to thresh by the hour, the prevailing price for such work being $10 an hour. This worked a hardship on the farmers, for where the grain was light the yield scarcely paid threshing expenses, one case being recorded where the cost of threshing was over 30 cents per hundred. Naturally, the farmers objected to what they considered an unfair advantage being taken by the owner of the threshing, and one threshing finally gave it up as a bad proposition and moved to the north side of the river, where he came from.

AMUSEMENTS

The eighth week—the first half of the Ethel Tucker Stock company engagement at Eastlake park—came to an end Saturday night last, and to say that the company, collectively and individually, have made an impression to be envied by their work is putting it mildly. They have one and all shown that they are here for work, and that they are giving to the theatrical public of Phoenix their very best endeavor, and that the Phoenix public has appreciated the fact is attested by the best business from the financial end that has ever been done in the Park theater.

The plays presented have been varied, and first class in every respect, ranging from the best to be obtained in farce comedy through comedy drama to the classic plays, the great successes of the present day. Notably is this true of this company's production of "Carmen," which in itself would be enough to stamp them artists in the highest sense of the word, and that Miss Tucker in the title role was beyond comparison it is needless to say. In action she was more than charming; her wardrobe was beautiful and appropriate.

Miss Tucker has not only demonstrated her ability as an actress during the engagement, but also as a stage director, in which line of work she has no superior in the stock theaters of America. In fact, that line of work has been offered her exclusively in the leading stock theater of America—the Castle Square, of Boston. Every member of the company has been called to bring out his strong points and every play is a production in the highest sense of the word.
